The project was conceived by Val Turner, the Shetland Archaeologist, and was funded through the Shetland Amenity Trust by Historic Scotland. Staff of the Shetland Amenity Trust, especially Val Turner, Bidy Simpson and Ann McArthur are to be thanked for their help and assistance. Historic Scotland's inspectors Patrick Ashmore, Noel Fojut, Rod McCullagh and Richard Welander have provided help and input to the project since its inception, and it is through their support that the project has been brought to a conclusion.

The following people dug with me during May and June 1988 and to them I offer my grateful thanks: Stephen Carter (assistant supervisor), Paul Sharman (site assistant), Ann Prior (cook), Catherine Briggs, David Brooks, David Haigh, Jon Hall, Astrid Hudson, Ewan Johnson, Gary Lambert, Jane Mack, Emma McIntyre, Kirk McKenna, Helen Mikolaiczuk, Christine Mitchel, Jackie Staniswood, Joan Tait and Sue White. Mrs Bruce of Sandwick and Peter Farmer, the landowners, gave their kind consent and help and to them I am most grateful. The illustrations are the work of the author, Torben B Ballin and John Arthur (illus 1).

Other people who gave invaluable help and advice are Arch Henderson and Partners, Lerwick (auger), the South Cunningsburgh Grazings Committee, Graham Ritchie, P R Ritchie, Simon Buttler, John Drever, George Lees and the staff at Ancient Monuments depots at Hatston, Orkney and Fort Charlotte, Lerwick, the late Camilla Dickson, and last, but by no means least, my husband Torben Bjarke Ballin.
